

Susan has always been interested in art and found her outlet at an art shop owned by Gerry Klein. The Idea Shop was run by a group of talented women who provided her with both friendship and support. Less than a year after taking classes she was teaching, starting out with oils and moving to acrylics as their popularity grew. In the last 8-10 years, she has been focusing on watercolor. Over the years, she has taken many classes from experienced gifted artists. There is always something to be learned.

Susan has 19 published instructional books to her credit, several magazine articles, painting demos for brush and paint manufacturers, worked at a wholesale art distributor, has been featured in the Post and other local magazines as well as Better Homes and Gardens. In addition, she did licensing work through an agent.

Teaching for almost 40 years has not dulled her excitement at seeing the progress of a student or the starting of a new painting. She is forever grateful for the opportunities she has been given.
